

Contact Lenses FAQ

Frequently Asked Questions

- Who can wear contact lenses?
- At what age can you start wearing contact lenses?
- How much is this going to cost me?
- Are contact lenses difficult to take care of?
- This won't hurt much, will it?
- Can I use contact lenses while playing sports?
- Should I shell out extra cash for disposable contact lenses?
- Can I sleep in my contact lenses?
- Can I store contact lenses in tap water?
- Can I lose a lens behind my eye?
- How can I tell if I have the lens in the wrong eye?
- How can I tell if a soft lens is inside out?
- My lens has a very small chip or tear in the edge, but it doesn't bother me. Should I replace it?
- How do I know when to dispose of disposable contact lenses? They seem to be OK longer than I expected.
- My eyes get dry. What kind of eye drops can I use?
- I used to make my own saline. Is there a problem with that?
- There are so many solutions out there. How do I know which is best?

Who can wear contact lenses?

Contact lenses can be worn by just about everybody to correct just about any eye condition. They can correct both near-sightedness and far-sightedness, as well as astigmatism and presbyopia. Contact lenses can even be worn by people who don't need vision correction, but who simply want to change their eye color.

At what age can you start wearing contact lenses?

That largely depends on how responsible you are. Contacts have frequently been used with premature infants, who sometimes have vision problems. With proper care and maintenance, people of all ages can wear contacts safely and effectively.

How much is this going to cost me?

